How Can You Survive and Thrive as a Music Teacher?

- Public and private schools have limited availability and budget. They are full of red tape, politics, and uninterested students.
- Music schools consider you a replaceable contractor. They rarely give stability, security, benefits, or retirement savings.
- Starting your own teaching business is extremely risky with more time spent running the business than teaching.

The Sage Music® Solution

What if you COULD make a career out of teaching music? What if you were offered stability, security, medical, dental, vision benefits, and a matching 401(k) all at a company that cares about you.

Sage Music® has approached an unregulated industry and brought standardization, comfort, security, and credibility to the way music teaching SHOULD be done.

"I was being pulled in a million different directions. I was so tired. Working so many hours a week. Driving between gigs. Trying to get paid from the gigs. Making lesson plans." ... "If I could just have some stability, and not so many jobs, I could really focus and take care of my students. So I looked for a school that could offer me that, but I couldn't find one anywhere, because one didn't exist. So we built it."
